CHANCELLORSVILLE, VA., TEN MILES WEST BY SOUTH OF FREDERICKSBURGH, Saturday, Midnight, May 2, 1863.

I.

The military operations which have been in progress on the line of the Rappahannock for a week past, have to-day culminated in what, if not precisely a great battle, only escapes that designation because we all feel that greater, by far, remains behind.

Gen. HOOKER, by a series of brilliantly audacious manœuvres and movements, of a celerity wholly unmatched in this war, has succeeded in crossing the Rappahannock River, and gaining for his army a position ten miles west by south, and in the rear of Fredericksburgh.

Gen. LEE, at first completely surprised by this move, and utterly puzzled as to his antagonist's intentions, has, however, had time to recover himself, and with a hand almost equally bold in the grand game of strategy—abandoning his position in Fredericksburgh, and the line of twenty miles down the Rappahannock which he has held for months—has changed his front, and stands opposite us in the horrid gage of battle.

We have secured a strong position, completely turning the line of rebel defensive heights in the rear of Fredericksburgh, against which our army on the 13th of last December madly dashed itself. This, as Gen. HOOKER expresses it in his inspiriting order of Thursday, gives us the advantage of compelling the enemy to fight us on ground of our own choosing.

Figure to yourself a huge triangle or redan, one leg of three miles long, resting on the south side of the Rappahannock, above Fredericksburgh, and between Banks and United States Ford, and the other on Hunting Creek, an affluent of the Rappahannock, with the apex at Chancellorsville, and you have, in outline, the situation as it now stands. This position, naturally strong, has been rendered doubly stronger by breastworks and abattis thrown up in front to cover the troops.

Imagine, now, the enemy massed in front of this position—front to front, and flank to flank—and you have the rebel situation. Take into account, also, that the enemy have strengthened themselves by the same appliances adopted by us.

These relative positions were assumed three days ago, and the history of that period is that of skirmishing along the advance line, developed in front of both armies—we feeling the enemy at various points, the enemy feeling us at various points.

This afternoon and evening, however, the enemy was emboldened to depart from these minor operations, and make a bold coup, by attacking our right flank in force, and attempting to double us up. About 6 o'clock this evening, JACKSON—you will recognize as I go on the operations and all its circumstances as one quite in his style, and the affair will recall to you Cedar Mountain and other memories—with his whole corps of forty thousand men, threw himself impetuously on our extreme right, formed by the Eleventh Army corps, under command of Major-Gen. HOWARD. The assault was one marked by all the dash and audacity that characterize his mind, and as it was made precisely at our weakest point, and on a corps which JACKSON has already several times beaten, it was well calculated to succeed.

That he only partially succeeded in turning our flank was not owing to the conduct of the Eleventh Army Corps, which was disgraceful, but to the superb generalship of HOOKER, who promptly threw reinforcements on our right to stop the enemy's advance. Such changes in our position as circumstances dictated are to-night being made—I must not at present mention what they are—and there is little prospect that the enemy will succeed in his purpose of either breaking our line or cutting our communications, while a vigorous offensive will probably in a few hours be assumed. The rebels will do one of two things: either abandon their position here and seek to make good their retreat to Gordonsville—the only line now left them, as Fredericksburgh has been abandoned, and their line of communication with Richmond is in all probability by this time cut—or they will remain here and give us battle.

It is, of course, impossible for me to predict which alternative Gen. LEE will adopt; but a few hours will develop; and if the hopes of our leaders and our own do not prove deceptive, you may expect soon to hear of the greatest victory of the war.

To make the battle of to-day intelligible in all its relations, it is absolutely necessary that I should take a brief retrospect of the operations of the entire week. You have already received from your correspondents current accounts of events as they have transpired; but as it was inevitable that these should be written without a full appreciation of the meaning and relations of the movements and manœuvres, it will be necessary to go back and trace the development of the situation from the start. Let me add that owing to the accumulation of material, I must abandon all hope of entering into a descriptive account, as my note-book would fill several pages of the TIMES, and must, to the sacrifice of artistic effect, treat it purely in its military relations.

II.

It is Monday morning, (April 27,) and the army is all in motion. The vast area it covers of miles and miles in extent is an animated scene of bustle and stir. The camps are "broken," and the comfortable log huts and Winter-quarters, in which the men have been lodged for months, are abandoned. Columns of troops are moving on this road and that, and on a dozen different roads—carefully concealing themselves from the enemy's view by marching through the woods and behind the knolls and ridges of the broken ground along the Rappahannock. Long trains of artillery, pack mules and ambulances add their own features of the imposing and the picturesque to the scene.

The movement would many days ago have been inaugurated but for these fickle April skies, which have left but brief intermissions of fine weather, and during the rest of the time have been deluging the country with rain, and ruining these treacherous Virginia roads. At length, however, operations are actually begun, and a new life and vivacity stir the men.

The army, in all its aspects, material and moral, is in splendid condition.

The army is larger than it was ever before materially. The health of the troops is better than it ever was before. From the first day Gen. HOOKER took command, it was felt that a directing brain animated the mass. Mens agitat molem. Great mobility has been secured by prodigiously cutting down the amount of transportation, and by employing pack mules, which go anywhere in all weathers, instead of our heavy wagons, which are always stuck in the mud. But two wagons are allowed to a regiment. The army is no longer encumbered with that ponderous impediment which used to be the marvel of all who beheld it. In fact, we now approximate the French standard, which enables an army to carry fourteen days' provisions without a wheel behind it.

The moral transformation is not less complete. It may be in the recollection of some of your readers that I had occasion two months ago to give a minute dissection of the condition of the Army of the Potomac as it was at the time of the last bungling campaign on the Rappahannock. I was accordingly much interested, after an absence of a couple of months, to make a comparative study of the internal change that had come over it in the interval under the new military régime. The metamorphosis could hardly have been more complete, and I have often had difficulty in convincing myself that that army, where general croaking, jealousies, disaffection, desertion and universal demoralization prevailed, is the same with this in which a new vitality animates the men, system, harmony and organization are seen, and a true military spirit pervades the troops.

Nothing in this line of phenomena struck me more than the admirable secrecy that existed in regard to the proposed plan and movements of the opening campaign. It was a new and somewhat tantalizing sensation; for any one who has followed the movements of the army in the field will bear me out when I say, that hitherto projected operations have always been known and discussed by nearly everybody—even the negro servants in the camps—for days and weeks before they took place. In this case absolute ignorance prevailed. Not even the corps commanders knew what was intended, and had only their specific individual order for the day.

Accordingly, early in the week every one was rubbing his eyes, and asking where is the army? No one could tell. Here was a column moving up, another moving down, and the column that was up yesterday proves to be down to-day. I confess I was heartily glad of the general bewilderment, though it was rather puzzling for a correspondent to observe movements along a line twenty-five or thirty miles in length. In this case, it was the spectators of the great game of chess that were blindfolded. The master player alone had his eyes open.

In the great game of war, time and space are the elements with which the General has to deal. Celerity (and for that purpose the greatest possible mobility) with secrecy are the indispensable conditions of all military combinations. The mind of Gen. HOOKER is one that will put forth all the resources of these elements.

By Tuesday morning, however, an acute eye might begin to take in a rough outline of a plan from the dispositions then made of the troops. Three of the seven corps d'armée composing the Army of the Potomac—namely, the First Corps, (Maj.-Gen. REYNOLDS,) the Third Corps, (Maj.-Gen. SICKLES,) and the Sixth Corps, (Maj.-Gen. SEDGWICK,) had been moved from their camps the night before and had taken up their positions at the same point of the Rappahannock where Gen. FRANKLIN had his crossing at the time of the battle of Fredericksburgh—namely, two miles below that city—and covered from the enemy's view by the curtain of hills that fringe the Rappahannock. While these movements are going on, other columns, consisting of the corps of Gen. MEADE, (the Fifth,) and Gen. SLOCUM, (the Twelfth,) are moving on different roads, and have taken up positions up the Rappahannock, in the neighborhood of Banks' and United States fords, which are respectively eight and eleven miles above Fredericksburgh, and are, it will be remembered, the places selected by Gen. BURNSIDE for his crossing on the occasion of the mud campaign.

These circumstances made it probable that operations would be inaugurated at both points, though it still left one entirely doubtful as to where the main attack would be, whether below or above, and the more so, as—albeit the general disposition of the troops was as indicated—Gen. HOOKER still held the balance of power in his hand, ready to throw large reinforcements either up or down. It was fair to suppose, however, that the operations at one point would be merely of the nature of a demonstration, while the real attack would be made at the other. The points being fifteen miles apart, and out of supporting distance, it was not to be presumed that he would thus divide his army, and give the rebel commander (who held the centre position on the chord, while we occupied the arc,) this opportunity of falling upon and beating us in detail.

Before dawn of Tuesday the pontoon boats had been taken from the wagons, a couple of miles below Fredericksburgh, and under cover of a very heavy fog, were carried noiselessly down on men's shoulders to the river's brink and deposited in the water. They were immediately manned by the troops of RUSSELL'S brigade, (BROOKS' division, Sixth Army corps,) and rapidly pushed over, in the manner taught us by Gen. HUNT at the time of the crossing in December. The rebels here, as at every ford for forty miles up and down the river, were posted along the river's margin in double lines of rifle pits, containing, perhaps, a couple of hundred men each. At the lower crossings, however, they made but a feeble resistance, and in a few moments our men were in possession of both lines of rifle pits, with the loss of half a dozen men. Indeed, a rebel Lieutenant captured here, a disingenuous young man, told us that they had been expressly instructed not to offer very serious resistance. This being accomplished, the whole of BROOKS' division was passed over the three pontoon bridges which were immediately constructed under charge of Chief-Engineer BURNHAM, to hold the position and the bridge-head.

A mile and a half below the position of Gen. SEDGWICK'S bridges, at an estate called Southfield, REYNOLDS' command was also instructed to effect a crossing. In doing this, however, they were not quite so lucky as those above them. Daylight had come while the engineers were still endeavoring to get the pontoon boats down to the water, but the fire from the rebel sharpshooters, who were placed in rifle-pits which had been thrown up opposite them, also succeeded in delaying operations so much, that it was 10 o'clock in the forenoon before they could be got into the water. To silence the fire of the sharpshooters, Col. WAINER, commanding artillery on the extreme left, under the able Chief of Artillery, Gen. HUNT, brought forty guns to bear upon them. This completely "corraled" them, for they were afraid of leaving their pits and exposing themselves to the murderous fire of the artillery. This detained them until a force was able to push over in boats, when, charging up the hill, they captured all the men in the first row of rifle-pits, numbering about one hundred and fifty. Immediately after the crossing of this force, a couple of pontoon bridges were built, and Gen. WADSWORTH'S division of REYNOLDS' corps was thrown over. Gen. WADSWORTH himself, however, did not wait for the completion of the bridges, but while his men were crossing in the open boats, plunged in on horseback and swam his horse over to the other side.

Thus far, it is to be noticed that but one division of each of the two army corps had been sent across the river—the remaining four divisions stayed on the other side. But they were not idle. They were put in motion on the hill-slope on one side of the river, and in plain view of the enemy were marched along the crest of the ridge and down, as though to the crossing. But, instead of crossing, they were quietly drawn up back through a gully, round the rear of the ridge, and round again on its top. They made the appearance of an army of at least a hundred thousand men, and must have presented the appearance of a massing on our side, preparatory to a passage of the river under cover of the night. The same "circuing" was performed by the artillery, the same by the wagon trains.

Was this a ruse de guerre? It could hardly be anything else—and yet to any one but a careful observer, even on our side, the deception could not have been detected.

The effect on the rebels was prompt. Two hours afterward their columns began moving up the Bowling-green road from down the river. Here a considerable force, including the whole of JACKSON'S corps—first, TALIAFERRO'S brigade, down opposite Port Royal, then coming up successively, A. P. HILL'S brigade, D. H. HILL'S division, and EARLY'S brigade—had been posted as a corps of observation. The Bowling-green road is at this point a sunken road; but we soon began to detect at various points the rebel column moving up—we were removed say a couple of miles—the bayonets glistening in the sun.

Were the same plains that witnessed the savage fight last December to see a renewal of it to-day? There was certainly every appearance of it. Our main force was massed here; a hundred and fifty guns were in position on the heights on our side, and the two divisions across the river were busily engaged strengthening the rebel rifle pits now occupied by them.

In the afternoon I passed over to the old battle-ground. It was now covered with a beautiful carpet of green; while the brilliant peach and hawthorn blossoms scented the air and delighted the eye. It is a superb plain for a review—several miles in length and one and a half in width—where both armies of the Potomac might march and countermarch; but a horrid place for a battle. At the rear of the plain the ridges rise, forming a perfect amphitheatre of hills around, thickly studded with rebel batteries, affording a hideous converging and enfilading fire on any troops attempting to pass across it. In the mind's eye one might see that battle raging and its fierce antagonisms painted on a canvass of air.

History, it is said, repeats itself; but I knew too well Gen. HOOKER'S ideas on throwing troops against fortifications, when the resources of strategy enable one to circumvent them, to think for a moment that he would repeat that horrid episode. Margin all the army, therefore, I firmly held to the impression that this was, after all, but a demonstration, and that the hot work would be elsewhere.

Passing up the river we have fresh confirmation of this. During Sunday and Monday, HOWARD'S corps, (the Eleventh,) SLOCUM'S corps, (the Twelfth,) and Gen. MEADE'S, (the Fifth,) had been moving to the upper fords of the Rappahannock. On the night of Tuesday, between 10 P. M. and 2 A. M., HOWARD'S entire corps crossed the Rappahannock on the pontoon bridge at Kelly's Ford, twenty-seven miles above Falmouth. At day-light Gen. SLOCUM'S corps followed, and during the forenoon Gen. MEADE'S corps was thrown across.

This movable column then struck direct for Germania Ford on the Rapidan River, distant twelve miles, one of the main affluents of the Rappahannock, into which it empties at United States Ford. Gen. MEADE, however, instead of taking this direction on passing the river, struck a road diverging eastward, and made Ely's Ford on the Rapidan, eight miles nearer than Germania Ford, to the embouchure of that stream into the Rappahannock. At Germania Ford, a force of about a hundred and fifty rebel pioneers was discovered building a bridge. These, by a well executed manœuvre, were all captured.

Celerity of movement being the chief desideratum, it was received immediately to put the troops over by wading—an affair not very easy of execution, for the waters of the Rapidan, even at the ford, come up to a man's shoulder, and the current is very rapid. The men, however, plunged in, many of them stripping and carrying their clothes and cartridge boxes on their bayonets—and waded over, up to their armpits, amid Homeric scenes of laughter and gayety—a cavalry picket being placed below to catch those that were carried away by the current. In the meantime a foot bridge had been constructed on the abutments already placed there by the rebels, and during the night the whole remaining force was passed over, the place being lighted up with huge bonfires. While this was going on at Germania Ford, MEADE'S troops were crossing at Ely's Ford. Both columns now moved as ordered, for Chancellorsville, at the junction of the Gordonville turnpike with the Culpeper and Orange Court-house plank road—communication being kept up between the two movable columns by a squadron of PLEASANTON'S cavalry, while another part of the same horsemen moved on the right flank of the outer column to protect it from rebel cavalry attacks. This manœuvre having uncovered United States Ford (which lies between Kelly's Ford and Falmouth—twelve miles from the latter,) COUCH'S corps, which had, for three days, been lying at that point, was passed over the Rappahannock by a pontoon bridge on Thursday, without any opposition or indeed any demonstration more formidable than a brass band playing Hail Columbia. This force also converged toward Chancellorsville and on Thursday night four army corps—namely, HOWARD'S, SYKES'S, MEAD'S and COUCH'S were massed at this point. That same night Gen. HOOKER and staff reached Gordonsville and established his Headquarters in the only house here.

III.

I think you will readily agree with me that there are few examples in history of a military movement of such proportions, executed with such celerity and success. To have marched a column of seventy-five thousand men, laden with sixty pounds of baggage, together with artillery and trains, thirty-six miles in two days, to have bridged and crossed two streams along a line which a vigilant enemy undertakes to observe and defend, with a loss of perhaps half a dozen men, one wagon and two mules, is an achieve which assuredly has had few parallels.

Remember how enormously difficult the task of crossing the Rappahanock proved last December, how two days were spent in the attempt after we had our force massed on the river's edge, and with what loss it was finally accomplished, and you will have the means of duly appreciating it.

There is no miracle about this result. It is simply the work of a planning and directing brain, with the most utter secrecy and the greatest possible celerity. But these qualities produce results which, in their ensemble, appear almost miraculous.

I remember, in my military reading, but one operation of precisely the same kind. It is the operation of Prince EUGENE against the French, who held the line of the Adige. EUGENE, by a series of skillful manœuvres, induced the French commander to scatter his troops along the line of the river; then, by dexterous feints, he entirely deceived his adversary as to the direction of his march, and the latter was suddenly surprised with the news that the line of the Adige was forced, and a detachment of his forces wholly routed at Carpi.

LEE'S surprise could not have been greater when he heard that the Union army was across the river and had turned his flank. And, indeed, we have not merely material proof of this—such as that, when we were across the Rapidan the enemy was yet picketing the Rappahannock—but we have documentary evidence of it in a letter from Gen. LEE himself, which was found in the house at Chancellorsville.

This letter, signed by Gen. TAYLOR, LEE'S Chief of Staff, was written to the rebel officer commanding the post at Chancellorsville, and was dated from LEE'S headquarters at 4:30 o'clock P. M., of the day we arrived. It stated, in substance that "the General had at that moment heard that the U. S. cavalry force was across Ely's Ford" (we had been across eighteen hours)—"that Gen. ANDERSON" (who commanded at United States Ford with a couple of brigades) "knew nothing of our arrival"—and asked him "to come down immediately and consult with the Commanding General."

The order which the commanding General issued on Thursday, after the achievement of this position, is the key to the situation, and to the expectations of the commander. I repeat it here for its relations with the recital:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, NEAR FALMOUTH, VA., April 30, 1863.

It is with heartfelt satisfaction that the General Commanding announces to the army that the operations of the last three days have determined that our enemy must ingloriously fly, or come out from behind their defences, and give us battle on our own ground, where certain destruction awaits him.

The operations of the Fifth, Eleventh and Twelfth Corps have been a series of splendid successes.

By command of Maj.-Gen. HOOKER.
S. WILLIAMS, Adjutant-General.

The significance of the emphasized words will be seen from a glance at the map of the country. It will be seen that the position gained at Chancellorsville, which is ten miles west by south of Fredericksburgh, completely turns the line of rebel defences on the series of ridges in the rear of Fredericksburgh, and in fact there was now but one alternative: the enemy must either retreat along the line of the railroad toward Richmond, while that line was yet uncut, (for there was no other line of retreat, the communication with Gordonsville being threatened by our hold on that line,) or else come out and "give us battle on our own ground." LEE had been completely outgeneraled, and in a strategic point of view had suffered a defeat before we had fired a single shot. It was in this sense, and not in the meaning that they were actually destroyed, albeit he anticipated nothing less than that, that Gen. HOOKER on the night of our arrival at Chancellorsville proudly exclaimed, "The rebel army is now the legitimate property of the Army of the Potomac."

Gen. LEE seems to have felt himself strong enough to pursue the latter alternative, and he took prompt measures to carry his plan into execution. There is very little doubt that he had been heavily reinforced with troops from the South. We are at the present moment fighting Charleston. For, like the attack on Fort Donelson, that movement had been made too soon. A month had passed since that attack, and its result had emboldened LEE to call up the great portion of the force in South Carolina. The troops for the defence of Charleston numbered fifty-five thousand men, and he could afford to feel able to draw on forty thousand of that number. In addition, LONGSTREET'S force had been recalled from North Carolina. Furthermore, it is the universal testimony of all the prisoners, (numbering several hundred taken during the past week) that their army has been heavily reinforced. What that force is, it is, of course, impossible to say. I think it would be unsafe to estimate it at less than eighty thousand, and there are those having good means of knowing who carry it to a hundred thousand.

Occupying, too, the interior line, LEE'S facilities for a change of front were, of course, very great; and our army had hardly gained its position when a rebel column was marching up to confront it.

On Saturday, two prisoners were brought in from the Twenty-third North Carolina, belonging to HILL'S division, of JACKSON'S corps. Their testimony (I heard them keenly questioned by the able chief of the secret service, who knows the position of every rebel regiment) showed that that division started from below Hamilton's crossing, in the rear of Fredericksburgh, at 3 A. M., of Friday, and that they were portions of the same column which we saw moving up the Bowling Green road, below Fredericksburgh, two days before. I mention this circumstance as a slight clue to the great game which was now being played between the two able leaders of the respective armies.

On Thursday night we were massed in the vicinity of Chancellorsville, simply covering the approaches.

On Friday morning, Gen. HOOKER began the strategic disposition of his force. As the enemy has since been engaged with us all along this line, and as the disposition has, since then, been altered, there can be no objection to state that it formed a line of battle of a triangular or redan shape, resting with its wings respectively on the Rappahannock between Banks and United States fords and Hart's Creek, and having its apex at Chancellorsville.

The day was occupied with operations along the skirmish line, and reconnoissances for the purpose of feeling the enemy.

The night previously, Col. MCVICAR, of the Sixth New-York cavalry, had pushed out on the Spotsylvania road; but having, in the ardor that characterized him, got far beyond the point intended by the General, FITZ-HUGH LEE, with two brigades of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery, got on a cross road between him and us. He had two hundred men, and there was but one course for him—to pierce through the enemy's line, leading the assault, sabre in hand, and he fell at the first charge. I knew him well. He was a Scotchman and gallant soldier, and he died as he would have wished—cutting his way through the enemy. The intrepid band left fifty of its number behind.

At noon of Friday SYKES' division of MEAD'S corps, occupying the extreme left, was sent out on a reconnoissance on the Banks' Ford road. They pushed the enemy steadily for an hour, gaining a mile of ground, which was in itself important as giving us possession of two successive heights, from which the enemy would annoy us with artillery. This accomplished, the order was given to fall back. There were those who were disposed to be captious at this, but the mind that took in the totality of operations knew well what he did. In itself the position was valuable; but it could not, without weakening us, have been made available in the general line.

In like manner a portion of SLOCUM'S command was thrown out about three miles on the Fredericksburgh plank road, and other advances of the same kind were made on the right.

These "feelers" had the obvious purpose of causing the enemy to develop his force; but they had also another purpose, not so obvious, namely: that of a topographical survey, as existing maps are enormously defective. Gen. HOOKER, with the chiefs of the Topographical Department, buried himself all day in making himself thoroughly acquainted with the ground.

It will not be out of place for us here briefly to do the same. The situation of Chancellorsville is in the middle of a clearing in the woods, which takes the form of an irregular ellipse, about a mile in length and half a mile in width. The military house that make up Chancellorsville stands almost in the middle of this opening.

The ground in the region between here and Fredericksburgh is broken and wooded, there being occasional clearings in the forests. It rises as it nears Fredericksburgh, when it develops into bold heights. Its strategic importance, as already indicated, is derived from the fact that it covers the Fredericksburgh turnpike and the Culpepper and Orange Court-house plank road, and threatens the line of Gordonsville.

IV.

The military situation on Saturday morning, therefore, stands as follows: Our main force holds the position at Chancellorsville, confronting the main rebel army now massed opposite us. HOWARD'S corps has the extreme right—then a division of SICKLES' corps—then SLOCUM—then COUCH—then MEADE on the left, HUNTSMAN'S division of MEADE'S corps holding the extreme of the left. Working parties have been employed during the whole night in throwing up breastworks, and the woods have resounded with the strokes of a thousand axe-men felling trees for the purpose of constructing abattis. We hear the rebels, not half a mile distant, at work with the same view, and in the morning both armies are well entrenched. It will now be who will come out and give battle. HOOKER is determined to put forth all the resources of the craft of which he is a consummate master, to tempt them out.

So much for the Right. Another, though minor force, is working on the left, independently, yet with its definite strategic bearings on the main operations. This subsidiary operation is at Fredericksburgh. Balloon reconnoissances show clearly that the enemy have taken their main force from the heights of Fredericksburgh and the line down the Rappahannock, and massed it against us at Chancellorsville. They have also removed the greater bulk of their artillery with the same end; and Gen. SEDGWICK, who commands the left, thinks himself strong enough to carry the heights. The Commanding General assents, if there be good prospect of success; for it is of the utmost importance not to anticipate the golden moment to strike.

But another cooperative role is assigned the powerful cavalry expedition under Gen. STONEMAN. This is nothing less than to cut the railroad bridges that cross the two affluents of the Pamunkey—namely, the North and South Anna—less than twenty miles from Richmond. The bridge over the North Anna is a hundred and fifty feet long and eighty feet high, and cannot possibly be reconstructed in less than a fortnight. You can see how tremendously this will embarrass the rebels.

Whether STONEMAN has by this time actually performed his task, is not yet reported. I have followed him only as far as Rappahannock Station, south of Culpepper, through which he dashed on Thursday night.

This rapid survey will indicate how colossal is the plan of campaign which Gen. HOOKER has marked out for the army. It contemplates nothing less than the destruction of the entire rebel force in Virginia. It is stupendously daring; but HOOKER is a man who thoroughly understands that, in war, to greatly gain one must greatly dare.

V.

The active operations of Saturday comprise a series of attempts in force on the part of the rebels to break our line at various points, which were in one case partially successful, in another completely successful, and in all the others completely unsuccessful.

In the morning, as we stood on the balcony of CHANCELLOR'S house, the attention was aroused by a sharp rattle of musketry coming from a column of rebels coming up by the main Fredericksburgh plank road, directly in front of us. EMORY'S battery, however, which was planted directly in front of the position, opened upon them, and after a few rounds caused them to retire.

Immediately afterwards a battery opened from the height which I have mentioned as having been gained by SYKES, yesterday, and then abandoned by us. The position was rather upwards of a mile distant from the cleared space, and its object was to damage our ammunition train which was visible to the rebels from the tops of trees on the height. One of our batteries was, however, immediately opened in reply. The third shot blew up one of the caissons and a subsequent shot blew up another, and this settled their account.

Subsequently a reconnoissance was sent, on our part, consisting of the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, (CARR'S brigade, BERRY'S division, SICKLES' corps,) on the same road by which the rebels had approached in the morning, for the purpose of feeling their strength. They went out on the plank road, deployed on both sides in the form of a letter V, chased the rebel skirmishers a couple of miles, till they came to a heavy double line of battle, with artillery in position, when they retired, bringing us that piece of intelligence.

Another reconnoissance was next sent out on our right, consisting of BERDAN'S sharpshooters. They met the enemy's pickets, drove them handsomely, and at 4 o'clock returned with fifty prisoners of the Twenty-third Georgia.

At 4 the rebels are moving down in force on the plank road, where we had a little before made the reconnoissance. GRAY'S division of SLOCUM'S corps is sent in on the double quick into the woods—their bayonets flashing in the sunlight. A sharp contest ensues, and in a few minutes they come back in disorder. A portion of KANE'S brigade, composed of raw troops, had broken, and thrown the column into confusion.

An Aid from SLOCUM comes to ask Gen. HOOKER if he can have reinforcements. "No! he must hoist his own. HOWARD will, of course, support him from the right. Let GRAY'S division, however, be thrown to the right of the road, so that the artillery may be able to sweep the enemy on the left." This movement presently repaired the damage, and checked the hope of the rebels being able to pierce our centre.

Foiled in this, they now prepared to make a still

The remarkable feature in the Bank return this afternoon is the large addition of six and a-quarter millions to the line of Loans and Discounts. There is no corresponding increase in the line of Deposits, so that the new loans have been made out of the surplus of United States Currency held by the Banks; a portion of them to the Government itself on 5 ₩ cent. interest, and another considerable share to the Stock Exchange Brokers at the same rate of interest. The market for Money has assumed more steadiness at this rate, and there is fair employment among the Brokers, owing to the increased volume of speculation upon the Stock Exchange.

There was extraordinary activity in the Share market, at rapidly advancing prices, this forenoon. The registered sales on the regular Board of the Stock Exchange amount to 70,000 shares. In addition to which a large business was done in United States Stocks, Missouri 6 ₩ cents, and Railway Bonds. The advance from Saturdays' prices was, in most instances, from 1 to 2 ₩ cent., and on some descriptions, like New-York Central, North Western, Terre Haute and Alton, Hudson River and Michigan Central, from 2 to 4 ₩ cent. After the session adjourned, the market was less firm, and a disposition was shown to avail of the morning's advance to realize profits and also to put out contracts ahead for a reaction. At the Second Board, this feeling was renewed on Erie, Harlem and a few other Stocks; but, in the main, the Share list displayed considerable stubbornness, and another large business was accomplished.

At 4 o'clock there was a further decline of 1 ₩ cent. in the price of Gold to 147@147¼ ₩ cent, and the turn of the Share market was to rather lower figures than on the printed list at the Second Board. This feeling, however, was not general, as Harlem recovered to 80 ₩ cent, and Erie sold at 55¾ ₩ cent. The following prices were finally made, as compared with the closing on Saturday night. After intermediate differences, 1@2 ₩ cent. had been made in the midst of the great excitement of the day. The Government Stocks were in demand, and higher on the coupons and registered Stock of 1881, and the 7.30 ₩ cents, August and February issue. The sales of the 5.20-year Stock, 6 ₩ cents of 1862, by conversion of United States Currency, amount for the day to $1,727,750.

The War news absorbed a large share of the public attention on Wall and William streets to-day. The utmost anxiety was felt for authentic reports of the progress and probable result of the great battle near Fredericksburgh. The rumors were, as usual on such exciting occasions, quite contradictory, but the market for Gold Coin acted as though good news had been telegraphed in cipher from near the scene of action. The price fell by 3 o'clock to 146¾ ₩ cent, as against 150 on Saturday night, and subsequently, as noted above, to 147@147¼ ₩ cent. The Treasury received $1,727,750 for United States Stock of 1862, of which $377,750 by direct subscriptions to the Assistant Treasurer, and $1,350,000 deposited by the Loan Agents.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

THE REBELLION.

Our special correspondence from the Army of the Potomac this morning gives full details of the important operations of that portion of the army under the immediate command of Gen. HOOKER. As it will, of course, be read by all, any digest of it is unnecessary. There was terrible fighting on Saturday and Sunday at Chancellorsville, the general results of which were in our favor, and the promise on Sunday evening was that further hostilities would end in the full triumph of our arms.

Our details of the operations of the forces below Fredericksburgh are also interesting. They are to Sunday afternoon. On Saturday morning the lower crossing was abandoned, in accordance with the general plan, and our forces were moved up nearer the city. During the afternoon it became evident that the rebels were abandoning the heights back of the city, but skirmishing still continued between the pickets, which became quite severe as our forces advanced to take possession of the Richmond road—a movement which was successfully accomplished. On Sunday morning very heavy cannonading commenced at 3 o'clock all along the rebel front, which was replied to with effect by our artillery. At 7½ o'clock the rebels were compelled to abandon their rifle-pits above Fredericksburgh, and by 8½ o'clock a pontoon bridge had been thrown across at the city, and the rebels had removed their guns from the earthworks above, which were soon afterward occupied by our forces. This advantage was pushed, during the afternoon, to such good purpose that the second ridge behind the city was also carried, and at last accounts our victorious troops had pushed on some four miles in the direction of the point at which Gen. HOOKER was engaged with the main body of the rebel forces. The casualties during these two days' operations, especially at Chancellorsville, have, of course, been heavy—how heavy it is impossible now to say. The lists prepared by our correspondents will soon reach us, and will be promptly published.

Gen. BURN yesterday telegraphed to Gen. HEINTZELMAN that a portion of the force of cavalry under his command had, in the morning, a heavy fight near Warrenton Junction, with the rebel Black Horse cavalry and MOSBY's and other guerrilla forces, ending in the utter rout of the rebels, with heavy losses in killed, wounded and prisoners. Our force made a terrific charge upon the rebels, which completely dispersed them in every direction.

Rebel reports received via Martinsburgh state that Gen. DODGE has advanced some distance east of Tuscumbia, and had encountered the rebel Gen. FORREST, with whom he had a fight on the 29th ult. Gen. GRANT is said to be at Union Church, on the Natchez and Hazelhurst road, supposed to be moving on Natchez. Gen. BANKS has captured Alexandria, on the Red River, and a naval battle has taken place at Grand Gulf, on the Mississippi.

An arrival at New-Bedford brings intelligence that the pirate schooner Retribution has been captured by the United States steamer Alabama. She chased the brig Leonidas into St. Domingo, and waited off that port for her to come out, when the Alabama fortunately made her appearance, captured her, and took her in tow.

The Government is dispatching steamers from St. Louis with troops and supplies, to the posts on the Upper Missouri, for the expedition against the Indians under the Gen. POPE. Gen. POPE himself has already gone forward to Sioux City, where it is said 8,000 or 10,000 troops are to rendezvous for the expedition. With such a force as this, under a commander possessed of so thorough an acquaintance with the Plains as Gen. POPE, the hostile tribes of the Far West ought to be completely crushed out and rendered incapable of further hostilities.

FROM EUROPE.

The steamship Etna, from Liverpool on the 22d ult., and Queenstown on the 23d, arrived at this port yesterday. Her advices are four days later. The excitement in England regarding the interference of American cruisers with the Matamoras trade, and the permit granted to a steamer by Minister ADAMS, continued. In the House of Commons, information had been asked regarding Mr. ADAMS' course. Mr. LAYARD said the question was under advisement, but no communication had been made to Mr. ADAMS. Mr. ROEBUCK wished information regarding the proceedings of Admiral WILKES, and the course the Government intended to pursue; but Lord PALMERSTON did not choose to give it immediately. It is stated in reference to the rebel gunboat Alexandra, that her owners and builders would probably in a few days be summoned before the local magistrates on the charge of designing to infringe the Foreign Enlistment act. From Paris, we have a report that the French Emperor has become offended at the course of the National Government and Admiral WILKES, and intends to recall Count HENOUIN. This report, however, is considered of a dubious character. There is no definite intelligence regarding the Polish revolution. In the Liverpool Cotton Market, prices were unchanged. Breadstuffs were steady, and Provisions dull. Consols were quoted at 92¼@93 for money.

GENERAL NEWS.

By the steamship Roanoke, which arrived at this port yesterday from Havana, we receive advices from Vera Cruz to the 17th ult. Puebla had, up to that time, not been taken. The French had been repulsed three times, in trying to take Fort St. Xavier, which it was finally abandoned by the Mexicans, and the ruins were quietly taken possession of by the French. The accounts in regard to affairs at Puebla vary, and contradict each other, victory being claimed by both the Mexicans and the French. They are mainly repetitions of the accounts which have already reached us.

The news from Havana by the Roanoke is unimportant. The steamer Vanderbilt, with Admiral WILKES on board, was at Santiago on the 24th ult., and was to leave next morning. The pirate Alabama is said to be once more in Cuban waters, she having been seen by the English brig Holland on the morning of the 17th ult.

The Board of Aldermen met at 1 P. M. yesterday, and changed their hour of meeting to 5 P. M.; adopted resolutions, presented by Mr. MITCHELL, extending the "freedom of the City" to Capt. JOSE POLO DE BERNABE and officers of the Spanish war-frigate Carmen, now on a visit to this port; and also adopted a resolution to establish a ferry on the East River, from the slip between Piers Nos. 33 and 35, to the foot of Bridge-street, and the foot of South Third-street, Brooklyn—a franchise for the same to be sold for ten years on the 1st of May, 1864, and in the meantime the right of the ferry, with power to put up the necessary bridges, &c., to be given to WILLIAM MARTENS, JOHN J. BELL and others. Mr. HARDY announced the death of Mr. JOHN OTTIWELL, father of Alderman OTTIWELL, and out of respect to the memory of the deceased the Board immediately adjourned, the adjournment being made till Thursday.

The Board of Councilmen met at 4 o'clock P. M. yesterday. The resolution to establish a new ferry on the East River was concurred in. The hour of meeting was changed to 5 o'clock P. M. Some routine business was transacted, and the Board adjourned to Thursday.

Hon. JAS. T. BRADY addressed an appreciative audience at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, last evening, on "The end of the War." He warmly indorsed the colonization scheme of Mr. ELI THAYER, and spoke words of cheering hope for the ultimate triumph of the Union cause. He declined to allow himself to be read out of the Democratic party, though he persisted in sustaining the vigorous prosecution of the war.

The trial of ASA CROSBY for the murder of his wife, by beating her with a chair on the night of the 5th of February last, commenced in the Oyer and Terminer, yesterday, before Judge INGRAHAM. The testimony for the prosecution closed, and counsel for the prisoner will open the defence this morning. District-Attorney HALL conducts the prosecution, and JOHN D. TOWNSEND and GERMAIN S. BEDFORD, Esqs., the defence.

In the Court of Sessions, yesterday, before Judge MCCUNN, the roll of Grand Jurors was called, and those answering to their names were discharged for two weeks. No case being ready for trial, the Court adjourned to this morning at 11 o'clock.

There was great excitement yesterday in the Stock Market, on an upward speculation in the Railway and other Shares. The Government Stocks were also higher, and $1,750,000 of the 5-20 year Stock was taken, by conversion of United States Currency at par. The Gold market was 2½ ₩ cent. down, and the Exchanges on Europe unsettled.

Business was impeded by the stormy weather yesterday. Light transactions were reported in Breadstuffs and Provisions, at generally reduced prices. Cotton was dull and heavy. Sugars and Molasses were in fair request. Teas, Coffee, Rice and Whisky were inactive. A fair inquiry prevailed for Hay and Refined Petroleum at uniform rates. The freight market was somewhat brisker.

There were only 2,300 cattle on sale at Forty-fourth-street yesterday, with not much prospect of further additions, though several droves might reach here did the market warrant sending for them. There seemed to be an understanding among drovers to hold back a portion of their stock, and thus operate for a rise. They were partially successful, but butchers held back strong. A few sales were made at near ¼c. advance, though the average was less than ¼c. higher. Common cattle sold very little if any better than last week. Most of the sales were at 10¼c. to 11½c. for medium to good cattle. Market generally inactive.

The Battles on the Rappahannock—Hooker's Position.

Two of our correspondents with Gen. HOOKER's army, arrived in the City yesterday, bringing the latest intelligence from the field of battle. Mr. SWINTON left Gen. HOOKER's headquarters at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning and reached this City at 6 o'clock yesterday morning: Mr. CROUSE left at 9 o'clock on Sunday evening and arrived at 10 o'clock last night. We have from them, therefore, very full and complete reports of everything that has happened on the Rappahannock down to a late hour on Sunday night.

Gen. HOOKER had thrown his army across the Rappahannock, taken a position on the left of the rebel intrenchments at Fredericksburgh thus compelling the enemy to leave his defences and fight on ground which HOOKER himself had chosen, and had fought two of the severest and bloodiest battles of the war, without attaining any absolutely decisive result, but achieving such successes as render the enemy's defeat or withdrawal nearly certain.

Recovering himself with masterly promptitude from what was well nigh a crushing disaster on Saturday night, when JACKSON succeeded in turning our right wing and routing the Eleventh corps, the battle was renewed on Sunday, and though not absolutely decisive, yet has put him decidedly on the winning side.

This battle is to the rebels by far the bloodiest they have yet had, while our sacrifice is much less. We have taken four thousand prisoners with a loss on our side of not a tenth of that number.

The result of Sunday's operations on the left is still more brilliant. The powerfully defended heights in the rear of Fredericksburgh, the attempt to take which cost us so dearly last December, have, by the movement on Chancellorsville, been turned, and after being gallantly assailed by SEDGWICK's corps, are now ours.

The rebel army is now, therefore, between two columns, separated but by an interval of five miles—the one a hundred thousand strong, the other twenty thousand. It will be strange if, between the upper and the nether millstone, the accursed thing is not ground to atoms.

THE REBELS AND GEN. MCCLELLAN.—The Albany Atlas and Argus, which seems to regard Gen. MCCLELLAN as the owner in fee of the American army, has the following paragraph:

"The Richmond Whig—secession organ—publishes an attack upon Gen. MCCLELLAN, who, after the pattern of its Northern allies, it ironically designates as the 'Young Napoleon;' and the NEW-YORK TIMES and Tribune, Abolitionists, together with all the Abolition organs of the State, reproduce the Whig's assault upon the Union commander, and make merry over its attempted bitterness."

We copied the article of the Whig without comment, except to protest against some of its conclusions. But there was a time when the opinions of rebel newspapers concerning Gen. MCCLELLAN had great weight with the Atlas and Argus. When that officer was at the head of our armies, we were constantly told by his party friends that he was the only general whom the rebels feared. The rebel papers were constantly praising him, and their praises found a ready echo in Northern journals of the Atlas stripe. This was kept up until he lost his position, having earned in it nothing whatever but these interested praises of the rebels and their Northern sympathisers. Now, when it is fully seen that they have nothing more to hope from his ascendancy, the Southern newspapers speak their full opinion of his merits as a soldier, and admit that more than once, nothing but his strange inaction saved them from destruction. Why does the Atlas and Argus reject now the evidence of witnesses on whom it formerly placed so much reliance?

NEWSPAPER ARMY CORRESPONDENTS.—Gen. HOOKER, on the 30th ult., issued an order requiring newspaper correspondents in his army to "publish their communications over their own signatures," and declaring that "in case of failure to comply with this order, through their own or their employers' neglect, such correspondents will be excluded from, and the circulation of the journals for which they correspond suppressed, within the lines of this army." In conformity with this requirement we append to our army letters the names of the writers, as we have done from the time the order was brought to our notice. We shall be very glad if in this way or any other Gen. HOOKER can succeed in suppressing the transmission of false intelligence, and the betrayal of the movements of the army by injudicious publications, of which he complains.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM MINISTER ADAMS

More About the Alexandra.

The Asia reached Liverpool at 6:40 on the afternoon of the 19th April.

Seizure of British Ships by Our Cruisers.

CORRESPONDENCE ABOUT THE DOLPHIN AND PETERHOFF.

From the Manchester Guardian, April 22.

A correspondence has taken place between the Foreign Secretary, the merchants and brokers interested in the steamship Peterhoff and other vessels, and the Post-office authorities, relative to the alleged illegal seizure of ships sailing under British colors and carrying Her Majesty's mails. It will be remembered that on Thursday last a deputation waited on Earl RUSSELL to represent the serious grievances sustained by English subjects at the hands of the Federal Government, and the apprehensions felt by owners of British ships lest these grievances may be continued. The owners of the Sea Queen stated to His Lordship, on the occasion of his receiving the deputation, that they had reason to believe it was the intention of the Federal powers to seize that vessel, wherever found, and, notwithstanding the fact that she carried no contraband of war, and that a suggestion was made to Earl RUSSELL that a naval vessel should be placed on board the ship in charge of the letter bags. Since the interview of the deputation with the noble Earl, the last-mentioned point has been again raised; but Messrs. BANNER and WARE have been informed that, "at Lord RUSSELL's recommendation, the Postmaster-General will, for the present, relieve vessels proceeding to Matamoras from the obligation of carrying ship letter mails." The other communications relate to the seizure of the Peterhoff. Under date of the 11th March, several passengers on board that ship write to her Majesty's Consul at Key West, complaining that they are deprived of their liberty, being actually detained on board while the vessel is ordered to Boston for adjudication. The protest was referred by the British Consul, Mr. BUTTERFIELD, to Mr. ALLEN, the Prize Commissioner, and by him to Admiral BAILEY, who declined to take action in the matter in the absence of Admiral WILKES, by whom the Peterhoff was seized. The latest information on the subject is contained in a letter addressed to the Clerk of the owners of the captured vessel. The letter, which is dated New-York, April 7, 1863, says: "On arrival here we were kept close prisoners on board the ship for two days; were then taken to a House of Detention, which was a very first-rate imitation of a prison—self, mate, steward, Mr. RENDIZZI, Mr. ALMEIDA and Mr. ROWSON. We were all together in the same room for three days. They have opened the mail bag in the presence of the Consul, but have not touched the packets; so he (the Consul) has protested against this proceeding, and I will not go unless I am forced to do so." Four men from the Federal ship then seized Capt. EUSTACE, lifted him over the gangway, and forced him from the deck of his own ship into the boat alongside belonging to the Wachusetts, the men who were picked out accompanying the Captain in the first boat load. The boatswain, WILLIAM HALES, one of these appearers, seeing one of the United States men handle roughly the cabin boy, who is twelve years old, and who was crying, pushed down the United States man, and locked the boy in the captain's room, and flung the keys to Capt. EUSTACE. HALES was, in consequence, roughly handled and shoved into the boat. Some of the United States men returned drunk to the Wachusetts, and it is these appearers' belief that they must have broken into the Dolphin's cargo; for the forehold, as a box of champagne was upon the deck of the Dolphin, and the boatswain of the first boat's crew was in irons three days for returning drunk from the Dolphin, and for striking one of these appearers when he was a prisoner on the Wachusetts. Capt. EUSTACE was kept on board the Wachusetts for two hours. In the meantime they ordered the engineers who were on board the Dolphin to start the engines, who refused, saying: 'We are British seamen; we did not ship to serve under the Stars and Stripes.' Finding they could not start the engines themselves, they came and asked the engineers again, who said if they got written orders from Capt. EUSTACE they would do so, but not otherwise. Capt. EUSTACE was then sent back to the Dolphin, and the second and third engineers, the firemen and the crew were ordered on board the Wachusetts, where they were detained until Her Majesty's mail Nile left St. Thomas, when they were landed at the American Consulate."

The reply received from the Foreign Office by the owners of the ship was that "this case shall be considered by Her Majesty's Government."

A letter has been addressed by Mr. GOURLEY, ship-owner, of Sunderland and London, to Mr. ADAMS, the American Ambassador, relative to the assumed right of the American Government to seize and overhaul British or neutral ships trading from this country to Matamoras, when chartered with strictly legal trades. Mr. GOURLEY states that the value of each of the vessels belonging to his firm is £35,000, and he gives Mr. ADAMS notice that if these vessels are detained, he will look to his Government for full and ample compensation during such detention, and that his claim will be £100 per day for each vessel. Mr. ADAMS has replied as follows to the communication of Mr. GOURLEY:

"I have no authority to grant any such papers as you propose, in connection with your vessels. It is matter of great regret that the lawless notoriously practised by evil-minded persons in this kingdom should have the effect of throwing suspicion over honest traders. It is not the wish of the Government of the United States to subject the latter to the least inconvenience; but, with the evidence in their possession of what does take place, it seems quite impossible to put confidence in all the professions that are made respecting the trade of Matamoras. If, in the process of examination which it is entitled to make, any inconveniences should be experienced by those who are acting in good faith, they must blame, in the first place, those of their countrymen who are abusing the protection of their country's flag to commit a wrong upon a friendly nation."

ANOTHER LETTER FROM MR. ADAMS.

The Times publishes a correspondence between the owners of the steamship Sea Queen, now waiting to sail for Matamoras, and Mr. ADAMS, the United States Minister. As Mr. ADAMS had stated, in supplying his certificates to Messrs. HOWELL & ZERMAN, that he had pleasure in giving certificates to any parties engaged in an honest neutral trade, the owners of the Sea Queen considered themselves entitled to apply for a similar protection, provided they could satisfy Mr. ADAMS that that vessel was honestly destined for a neutral port, with a cargo totally free from a single package that could be liable to a shadow of objection. Mr. ADAMS, in reply, says he has no authority to exercise any discretion in regard either to the vessels or voyage of Her Majesty's subjects, but, in the certificates which has been quoted, he made no allusion to questions of neutrality, but simply announced the cheerfulness with which he was prepared to assist honest parties. Messrs. HOWELL & ZERMAN are not British subjects, but Mr. ADAMS can hardly intend to intimate that he is anxious, by means of his certificates, to secure a monopoly of the trade between this country and America for British ship-owners, who will employ Americans or Mexicans to make interest for them. Mr. ADAMS seems to console the owners of the Sea Queen with the assurance that they are certain to obtain protection from their own Government, but indications that have transpired during the past few days have been published to the effect that yesterday he is not indulging in a little irony.

The Rebel Gunboat Alexandra.

The Times says this vessel has been exchequered, and Messrs. FAWCETT, PRESTON & Co., her owners, and Messrs. MILLER, her builders, will probably in a few days be summoned before the local magistrates on the charge of designing to infringe the Foreign Enlistment act. Messrs. FLETCHER & HULL, solicitors for the defendants, having applied to the Mayor of Liverpool for an inspection of the depositions, were informed by the Town Clerk that he was instructed by Mr. WADDINGTON, of the Home Office, that the Law Officers of the Crown advised that the application ought not to be complied with.

Various rumors were current in Liverpool as to the probable course of the Government. One was that they had postponed their charges against the builders of the vessel for a brief period; and another (said to be founded on good authority) asserts that the Government would give up the steamer immediately, there being no conclusive evidence of her being intended for the Confederate Government.

The Liverpool Journal of Commerce of April 16, says:

"Yesterday afternoon Mr. HAGIL, the solicitor to the Treasury, who has been in this town during the week receiving evidence and making inquiries respecting the gunboat Alexandra, which has been seized by the Government, left for London by the express train, having, we understand, completed his preliminary investigation, the result of which will now be laid before the law officers of the Crown."

The Liverpool Post of the same date says:

"It was rumored on 'Change yesterday that the Government had postponed these charges against the builders of the Alexandra for a brief period, so that Mr. HOSKALE and his friends, on Friday night, will have to appear before the ex parte judicial court, undoubtedly deprived of some telling arguments in their favor. Messrs. FLETCHER & HULL, the legal agents for Messrs. MILLER & Co., intend to apply to the Government for permission to complete the construction of the Alexandra."

The London Herald goes on so far as to state that Messrs. W. C. MILLER & Co. intend commencing an action against the Government for stopping them at work on the Alexandra. The inquiry, so far, is strictly private, but it will going on; meanwhile she is in the hands of the Customs authorities, no one else being allowed on board.

Organized Trade with the Rebels.

From the Leeds Mercury.

We are informed upon trustworthy authority, that a prospectus has just been issued for an English joint-stock company, with a proposed capital of several hundred thousand pounds, for conveying cargoes of "assorted goods" from England to "a well-known port in Mexico," payment for the goods to be made in Confederate cotton. This well-known Mexican port is no doubt Matamoras, and the object of the proposed company is the evasion of the Southern blockade, by furnishing goods to the South via Mexico. We are not prepared to say that the company or its objects are illegal, or that so long at least as the vessels which it charters are not under control of war, those vessels would be subject to search by Northern cruisers; but can any one in his senses doubt that such a traffic would be in the highest degree offensive to the States, or that it would not tend to embroil us with the Government of Washington? It may keep within the letter of the law, but it will not the less be regarded as another blow struck by Englishmen at the North, and as another proof of our complicity with the South. We indeed fully accept its sympathies of any Southern peculiarities. They probably care nothing at all for the interests of the Confederate States, and are simply bent upon turning a penny to the very best advantage. They only send their "assorted cargoes" to Matamoras rather than to New-York, because the former seems the better speculation. But, although they act from purely selfish motives, credit will be given to them at Washington for sympathy with the South, and they will be regarded there as representatives of English feeling.

France.

The London Morning Herald says it was rumored at Paris that, in consequence of the unfriendly and offensive acts of the Washington Government, the Emperor had resolved to recall M. MERCIER.

The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post says the Governments of England and France are seriously engaged in maritime questions with America.

The Daily News, of the 22d, says, in its City Article:

"The Stock Exchange yesterday was influenced by the uncertainty as to NAPOLEON's intentions respecting Poland, and by the belief that our Government is impressed with the necessity of resisting American interference with our trade and shipping. It is also said that the French Government is very indignant at the facilities offered by Mr. ADAMS for the transmission of arms and warlike stores to Mexico, to be used against the French forces."

NEW-YORK, April 19, 1863.

A little daughter of mine has been affected with a troublesome discharge from both ears, the result of scarlet fever. Dr. Lighthill, under whose care I placed her, has removed the discharge completely, and improved her hearing. W. H. RAYNOR, No. 6 Pine-st.

NEW-YORK, April 18, 1863.

A member of my family had had a troublesome affection of the ears since infancy. I was recommended to place her under the treatment of Dr. Lighthill, and I am happy to state that he has been completely successful in her case. Those who desire to know the particulars may apply at my residence.

SCHENECTADY, Jan. 17, 1863.

Dr. Lighthill—

SIR: Having been cured by you of a discharge in an ear, which has been very offensive of late, and as far back as I can remember, always more or less so; and having been entirely restored to hearing since under your care, I feel that I cannot withhold this acknowledgment from any use it may be to others, especially as I have applied in vain to my family physician and other physicians of reputation. Yours, truly, JOHN NOTT.

CATARRH CURED.

From Rev. P. R. Russell, Lynn, Mass.

I have been much troubled with catarrh of the worst type for some twenty years. It gradually grew worse, producing cough and hoarseness, destroying the sense of smell, and breaking down my general health to such a degree as to compel me to resign my pastorate, and suspend public speaking.

I made diligent use of the usual remedies, such as snuffs of different kinds, nitrate of silver, tar water, olive tar and inhalations, but without any very salutary effects. Last Summer I heard of Dr. Lighthill's successful mode of treating catarrh, visited him, and put myself under his treatment. I began immediately to improve, and this improvement has gone on to the present time. My catarrh has gradually melted away, my cough has disappeared, my voice has become natural, and I am once more able to preach the blessed Gospel. Let me advise all troubled with catarrhal difficulties to apply to Dr. Lighthill.
P. R. RUSSELL.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 1, 1863.

NEW-YORK, June 20, 1862.

Dr. Lighthill:

DEAR SIR: I am pleased to be able to testify to the efficacy of your treatment in the case of my wife, whose hearing in one ear you succeeded in restoring, after treatment of various kinds had been applied in vain. I may furthermore state that her hearing remains good up to the present time, though it is several years since she has been under your care. E. CLAYBURGH, No. 141 Duane-st.

NEW-YORK, July 20, 1862.

I hereby certify that I have suffered during many years from trouble in hearing—one ear at last became entirely deaf, and the other so bad as to render conversation very difficult. I applied to Dr. Lighthill, of No. 34 St. Mark's-place, who, in a short time, and without pain, restored to me the use of my ears, so that I can now hear perfectly well. J. BISCO, No. 128 East 23d-st.

METROPOLITAN HOTEL, NEW-YORK, April 1, 1862.

DEAR SIR: I take much pleasure in testifying to the professional skill exhibited by you in your treatment of a case of severe inflammation of the throat and ear with which I have lately been afflicted. Upon coming under your charge I was immediately relieved and speedily cured of a most aggravated complaint, which several physicians had previously sought in vain to mitigate.

As I am somewhat of a stranger in the City, I could state that you are at liberty to substantiate my statements, if necessary, by reference to my relatives, Mr. A. V. Stout, President of the Shoe and Leather Bank of New-York, and to Mr. Everett Clapp, of the Western Transportation Company, No. 1 Counties-slip.

With much esteem, I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
FRED. M. HANKS.

NO. 12 CORTLANDT-ST., NEW-YORK, Jan. 2, 1863.

DR. E. B. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: It is with the kindest feelings toward you, and hoping to do service to some one who is afflicted, that I forward the inclosed document to you.

To whom it may concern: I am personally acquainted with the success which attended Dr. Lighthill's treatment in a case of discharge from the ear and chronic inflammation of the throat, and would be pleased to give further information on application.
V. D. W. WEEKES.

I placed my wife under the care of Dr. Lighthill for deafness in one ear of nearly three years' standing, accompanied by constant noises. I am happy to state that her hearing is now entirely restored, and the noises removed. Those residing in New-York who are desirous of further information may apply to my brother-in-law, Capt. William Edwards, at No. 68 East 34th-st., who is acquainted with the circumstances of the case.
FRANCIS GOULDY.

I have been suffering for some time with noise in my head, and deafness. Having applied to Dr. Lighthill, I have great pleasure in saying that he has completely relieved me, so that now I can hear as well as ever, and am not troubled with the noise in my head.

I may also mention that a young man named Henry Laws, staying with me, was also afflicted in a similar manner, and Dr. Lighthill was equally successful in his case. JOHN MURDOCK, No. 197 Fulton-st.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 2, 1863.

NO. 42 FIFTH-ST., NEW-YORK, June 26, 1862.

DR. LIGHTHILL—Dear Sir: I take pleasure in testifying to the remarkable skill and judgment you displayed in the case of my daughter, who had been partially deaf, accompanied by discharge from the ears, since early infancy, and is now, thanks to your treatment, able to hear as well as any one, while her ears are free from the discharge. Although it is nearly two years since she has been under your care, her hearing remains as good, and her ears as sound, as the day she left you.

ROMAINE'S CRIMEAN BITTERS

In our introductory advertisement of this invaluable preparation, we stated that it had been used, in modified form, during the Crimean war, with the happiest results in the cure of several diseases incident to camp life, and as an eminent tonic and alterative; that it had also been used in its present improved form for several months in the U. S. Hospitals at Newark, with like favorable results, which were attested to by the attending physicians, whose certificates can be seen at our depot; and that it had likewise been used, in some of the most respectable families in New-York, Brooklyn and other adjacent cities, with the most decided and beneficial effect on convalescents, as well as those afflicted with diseases to which it is particularly adapted. Since then corroborative evidence has been accumulating from all quarters, and wherever this most agreeable preparation has been used, and certificates without number could be furnished in support of our claim for it, as one of the most agreeable and valuable exhilerant tonics ever offered to the public.

The following certificate from three well known and eminent chemists, Drs. J. R. Chilton and J. G. Pohle, will show in what estimation it is held by those most competent to judge of its merits:

CERTIFICATE.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 16, 1863.

From a knowledge of the ingredients and their proportions entering into the composition known as "Romaine's Crimean Bitters," we are enabled to speak of it in terms of high commendation. Peruvian bark being one of its principal constituents, together with herbs, roots and extracts having decided medicinal properties, we have no hesitation in recommending it to physicians and the public generally as an invigorating tonic, intended to stimulate the digestive organs.

From its alterative properties, it is calculated to prevent, if taken daily in moderate quantities, constipation, fever and ague, mild forms of neuralgia and rheumatism. It is an antidote to the effects produced by change of water and diet, correcting diarrhœa, curing dyspepsia, colic, sick and nervous headache, nausea, sea-sickness. It is expressly adapted to females of delicate constitution and the infirmities of age.

This preparation is composed exclusively of vegetable materials, containing no metallic or mineral substances whatever. Its taste is aromatic, warming, and acceptable to the palate and stomach.

CERTIFICATES.

This is to certify that about eighteen months ago, I commenced using STERLING'S AMBROSIA. My hair was short, thin, and rapidly falling out. I had tried many Hair Tonics, Invigorators, &c., without receiving any benefit, but soon after using the Ambrosia, my hair ceased falling out, and grew rapidly and thickly, to the astonish me. Now, my hair is thick, soft and glossy, and is five feet four inches in length—when let down, reaching to the floor. This wonderful result I attribute solely to the use of STERLING'S AMBROSIA, and since I commenced using it I have applied nothing else to my hair.

DEAFNESS

NOISES IN THE HEAD,
Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,
CATARRH CURED
BY
DR. VON EISENBERG.

From the Journal of Commerce.

EXCITING NEWS FOR THE DEAF.—An instrument called Dr. Von Eisenberg's Air Passage Expander and Regulator, a gigantic machine, weighing nearly five hundred pounds, about five feet in height, a most wonderful apparatus for restoring sight and hearing, has just arrived for Dr. Von Eisenberg, the celebrated Oculist and Aurist, and will be on exhibition at the Doctor's office, No. 816 Broadway, for a few days previous to its use. The instrument is constructed, decidedly on the most scientific principles. To give a detailed description would require a greater space than we can now spare. Our Oculist and Aurist seems to do everything in the line of his profession on a gigantic scale. The new instrument for restoring hearing to the deaf and sight to the blind is so constructed that it cannot fail to open the most obstructed air passages. His new consulting rooms, No. 816 Broadway, are correspondingly magnificent, and his practice as Aurist and Oculist large and eminently successful.

SENSATION AMONG THE DEAF.—The unrivaled skill of Dr. Von Eisenberg, the far-famed Oculist and Aurist, of No. 816 Broadway, has made quite a sensation among the Deaf and Blind by his wonderful cures, which attract the Deaf, Blind and those suffering from Chronic Catarrh, from all parts of the Union to his office. The number of his certificates of really wonderful cures swells daily. For the benefit of sufferers, we submit the following, which requires no comment:

NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for about seventeen years, with discharges from both ears, the latter combined with continual rumbling noises in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his cure, when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treating with that of others, I feel truly glad that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR,
No. 19 Livingston-st., Brooklyn.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matted, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.
CARROLL J. FOLY, No. 8 Sackett-st.

NO. 156 MERCER-ST., NEW-YORK.
J. R. VON EISENBERG, M. D.—Dear Doctor: I have been afflicted with total deafness, and was induced to pay you a visit. No one can imagine my delight when, after one operation, my hearing was suddenly, and without pain, restored to me, for which I feel very grateful. After being totally deaf—almost shut out from the pleasure of using so necessary a sense—to have it returned, and to hear so distinctly, reflects great credit on you for the immense amount of skill you possess. I beg to thank you for what I can so truly appreciate. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 6, 1862.

DR. VON EISENBERG—Dear Sir: Before taking leave of you, after your most successful operation on my ear, I know not to express my gratitude for your most scientific surgical performance. I succeeded to hear distinctly, and enjoy a pleasure of which I have long been deprived—over a year. May you be rewarded by being enabled to perform many similar to benefit other sufferers, and to your own emolument.

Allow me to present my kindest regards, and assure you of my grateful remembrance. Respectfully,
A. McDONALD REYNOLDS,
Captain Marines, United States.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, March 25, 1862.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my faculties benumbed, accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as, to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case, that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health, that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

IODINE.

IODINE WATER.

A SOLUTION OF PURE IODINE IN PURE WATER.

The action of Iodine upon the human system has engaged the attention of some of the most scientific minds of the age. It is hard to conceive of any more convincing testimonials to the sterling worth of a remedy than those developed by the successive tests to which Iodine has been subjected.

Iodine is an elementary body obtained from seaweed, is very volatile, and has great control over Scrofulous Affections. It acts upon the Heart, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, and Glandular System. It dissolves mercury and lead, and the presence of organic matter does not prevent these changes. It neutralizes metallic mercury and all the mercurial compounds that can possibly occur in the living body, by forming a soluble compound which passes off through the kidneys.

The tonic operation of Iodine is evinced by its strengthening the digestive organs and increasing the appetite. In cases of Dyspepsia, Emaciation and Debility, an increased nutrition of the body is the result of the employment of Iodine. The patient recovers flesh, strength and color; hitherto pale, relaxed and feeble, he becomes full, strong and florid. Dr. Seguin, a French physician, praises its effects in obstinate intermittents which have resisted quinine.

In the different forms of Scrofula (the most astonishing results have been accomplished by the use of Iodine. Dr. Alexander Munson, of England, remarks: "With respect to the efficacy of Iodine in Scrofula and Scrofulous Ophthalmia, I think my experience warrants me in pronouncing it to be by far the most powerful and energetic medicine that I have employed in the cure of these diseases." The success of the eminent Dr. Lugol, of Paris, on the treatment of Scrofulous diseases with Iodine would stagger belief, were not the results substantiated by Committees of distinguished physicians of the French Royal Academy of Sciences. Many cases of White Swelling have been cured, and in some, where much disorganization had occurred, and the loss of a whole limb was apprehended, the use of Iodine arrested the destructive process, and the limbs were preserved. The most happy results have been attained in the treatment of Rheumatism, both chronic and acute. In Neuralgia, the use of Iodine has been of the utmost benefit. A patient whose life had been embittered for five years with neuralgic maladies was speedily relieved, and in six weeks completely cured, after Arsenic, Mercury, and most of the narcotics had been prescribed in vain.

In Syphilis, where the distress and agony were almost unendurable, the patient has been relieved in an exceedingly short time. In glandular enlargements and morbid growth the power of Iodine is highly esteemed. In induration and enlargement of the Liver or Spleen, where mercury has failed or is inadmissible, Iodine forms the best resource.

In Consumption the tubercles in the lungs are a production of the same character as those of Scrofula, and require the same course of treatment for their successful eradication.

The unparalleled success in private practice and the indorsement of high medical authority enable us to recommend Iodine Water—a solution of pure Iodine in pure water—as a specific for the cure of Scrofula, in all its manifold forms, Consumption, Cancer, Heart, Liver and Kidney Diseases, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Affections, Female Weaknesses, Dyspepsia, Syphilis, Mercurial Disease, and all those distressing and afflicting maladies which arise from an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, defective nutrition, an impure atmosphere, &c.

TESTIMONIALS.

Certificate of Dr. James R. Chilton, the Celebrated Chemist, after Analyzing Anders' Iodine Water.

I have analyzed the "IODINE WATER" prepared by Dr. Anders, and find it to be a solution of pure Iodine in water. It has long been a desideratum to prepare Iodine so that it can be administered in its uncombined state; this preparation by Dr. Anders enables us to effect that object. Each fluid ounce of Water contains about half a grain of Iodine. I consider it a valuable preparation, and one which will prove serviceable in all those cases where the use of Iodine is indicated.
JAMES R. CHILTON, M. D., Chemist.

Certificate from Professor James C. Booth, United States Mint, Philadelphia.

DR. HENRY ANDERS: The sample of Iodine Water tested by me, I find to be Iodine dissolved in pure water. Respectfully, yours,
JAMES C. BOOTH.

Certificate of Dr. E. Whitney.

GENTLEMEN: I have examined your Pure Iodine Water, and find it a pure solution of Iodine, containing a sufficient quantity for all practical purposes as a remedial agent. I have used it in obstinate cases of scrofula, and can attest its superior value in the treatment of this class of diseases. I am fully convinced your solution of Iodine, in pure water, is far preferable to any other form in which it has hitherto been used. Respectfully, yours,
E. WHITNEY, M. D., No. 402 4th-av.

Certificate of Dr. H. Klingstein, of Berlin.

MY DEAR DOCTOR: Not long ago I received your excellent Iodine Water, and I am again obliged to call for another dozen. I find in this short time, in my large practice, opportunity enough to see what a wonderful effect this great remedy exercises upon the afflicted. I have now only one bottle left, as I have used all the rest that you have sent me. I have cured bilious fevers in an astonishingly short time; and a case of chorea, of ten years' standing, I have also cured. I feel it a duty to say to you that I look on you as the inventor of one of the most valuable medicines that we have now in the catalogue of remedies, for really your Iodine Water is the only article of which we can say that the afflicted may avail themselves with a certainty of relief, and an ultimate restoration to perfect health. You have produced, Sir, by your discovery, a new era in the history of medicine. Wherever your new and invaluable preparation becomes known, it must acquire that popularity which such a rare remedial agent truly merits. I am, respectfully, yours, H. KLINGSTEIN, M. D.

To these may be added the remarks of American Medical Monthly, edited by EDWARD H. PARKER, A. M., M. D.

IODINE WATER—Samples of a preparation with this name have been sent to us by Dr. Anders, of this City, by whom it is prepared. Chemists generally state that Iodine can be dissolved in water, but that the solution is a very weak one, containing in fact only 1,7000 part of Iodine by weight. Dr. Anders states that this is only a simple solution in Croton water and may be made as strong as ¼ of a grain to the ounce. The preparation is a decidedly brown fluid, with a strong smell and taste of Iodine. When allowed to stand in an open vessel the color and taste both disappear, the remainder being simply limpid water. We have seen a copy of the report of an analysis made by Dr. Chilton, in which he states that he finds it "to be a solution of pure Iodine in water." It is a question of interest, by no means unworthy of investigation, what may be the therpeutical value of this preparation. If we can in this way introduce pure Iodine into the system without combination with any other substance, important results may follow. Practitioners should remember this solution when prescribing Iodine.

CAUTION TO LADIES.

Madame RESTELL, Female Physician, No. 182 Chambers-street, deems it her duty to caution ladies against impostors, who appropriate her advertisements word for word, recommending substitutes as important and wholly irresponsible persons as "Madame."

These persons have spurious "Female Monthly Pills" and other poisonous compounds to deprive the unwary or the easily duped, as well of their money as of their health. Madame Restell feels called upon to give this caution.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by DR. WARD & CO., No. 13 Laight-st., near Canal, without the use of Mercury, at office or by mail. And they will never disappoint the anxious patient. Office, No. 12 Laight-st., where Dr. WARD can be consulted confidentially, day and evening.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has, for thirty years, confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated no less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases, when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the weak and poisonous relic that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it. So hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some political patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. The popularity is so great, that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attempted it, and when they find out they are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 9 Division-st. Book for 25 three-cent stamps, 100 pages, 200 colored illustrations. The best work out.

more desperate dash on our right flank. We were aware that they had been massing against that point all the afternoon, and the terrible treble of the demoniac yell with which the rebels always rush into battle, announced their approach from the woods by the Culpepper plank road. JACKSON'S whole corps, reinforced by D. H. HILL'S division, numbering in all forty thousand men, had precipitated themselves on HOWARD'S corps, forming our extreme right wing. This corps is composed of the divisions of SCHURZ, STEINWEHR and DEVIS, and consists in great part of German troops. Without waiting for a single volley from the rebels, this corps disgracefully abandoned their position behind their breastworks, and commenced coming, panic stricken, down the road toward headquarters. Our right was thus completely turned, and the rebels in the fair way of doubling us up.

It was a critical situation, and brought out the superb resources of Gen. HOOKER. He was in the saddle in a moment, calm and cool—the master of a situation fit to overmaster the most. The first thing was to check the rebel advance, which must become fatal if allowed to go on much further.

It was a terribly animated scene. The whole open plain presented such a spectale as the sirocco might make in the desert. Through the dusk of nightfall a rushing whirlwind of men and artillery swept over the plain. The shattered, fleeing columns of men were rushing down and over us at headquarters.

HOOKER'S dispositions were made in a moment. Whom, at all others, should he send in at this fearfully critical moment, but the darling child of his own creation—his own old corps, now commanded by Gen. BERRY.

"General!" shouted the Commander, "throw your men into the breach—receive the enemy on your bayonets—don't fire a shot—they can't see you!"

Oh! it was a sight to see that glorious band rush at the double-quick to the rescue! Pressing up in their horrid array of glittering steel, the enemy's advance was quickly checked, and he had to withdraw to the line of breastworks just vacated by the Eleventh corps.

Batteries were immediately sent up in thunderous clamor to the front, and Capt. RAN, Chief of Artillery of SLOCUM'S corps, massed twenty pieces on the crest near Gen. SICKLES' headquarters, and a terrific fire was opened on the enemy, and kept up far into the night.

Gen. PLEASANTON, too, succeeded in turning back a dozen pieces taken from the flying corps and planting them in a favorable position, while he drew up his little brigade of cavalry, consisting of squadrons of the Sixth New-York, Eighth Pennsylvania and Seventeenth Pennsylvania, with drawn sabres to protect the guns (a novel sight in battle.) Directing the pieces to be double-shotted with canister, he swept the position occupied by the enemy with a murderous fire. The successful check of the advancing foe is in no small degree owing to the indomitable energy of this gallant soldier.

While this is going on, the panic-stricken Dutchmen are sweeping past us, and round by headquarters into the road leading to United States Ford. Many members of the Staff of Gen. HOOKER and other general officers placed themselves in the road, and with drawn sabres smote and slashed the cowardly retreating rascals. It was all in vain, however. The road for two or three miles down toward United States Ford is now crowded with their shattered fragments. Gen. HOOKER has, however, already sent SYKES' regulars after them. As to the loss sustained by this corps, either in killed or captured, it could not have been great—they ran too fast for that. I have the mortification to add that they allowed twelve pieces of cannon to fall into the hands of the enemy.

What makes this retreat not only disgraceful, but well-nigh disastrous, is that it completely foiled a splendid manœuvre which Gen. SICKLES with his corps was engaged in executing. He had gone in on a branch road leading off from the main pike, pierced the enemy's centre, penetrated for a mile, cut them in two, and would have secured the key to victory, when the turning of HOWARD'S position compelled him to make good his retreat, though he brought out with him four hundred rebel prisoners!

The artillery combat was prolonged till midnight, and the bursting of the shower of shells thrown by our batteries into the rebels made a spectacle that beggars all description.

During the whole crisis, Gen. HOOKER was under the severest fire, and his Staff, made up of young braves, performed prodigies of valor.

VI.

The task to be accomplished by the Commanding General during these night watches is one to tax his best energies. The enemy has completely turned our right, is now in our rear, and will, unless prevented, turn this immense advantage to account with the first dawn of to-morrow's light. He will doubtless draw in his line, bringing his right down perhaps to the neighborhood of Ely's Ford. He will replace the cowardly corps that has fled by MEADE'S Corps, than which there is none better in the army, and reinforce it by that of REYNOLDS, which is coming up from the left and is now within a couple of hours' march of here. If the enemy renew the attack in the morning, as there is every probability that he will, I predict a reception he is not prepared for.

The conduct of the Commanding General during the whole operations, and especially the amazing fertility of resources he has displayed in first checking what was well-nigh being a crushing disaster, and then making such an arrangement of his line as will render it stronger even than before, give him claims to rank as a first-class Captain. He certainly shows powers and qualities that have been displayed by no General who has yet commanded this army. I have seen the cold pedantry of MCCLELLAN'S mind, and the feeble well-meaningness of BURNSIDE; but here is a man who, while dashing in the extreme, is yet prudent in the extreme, whose resources are inexhaustible, who has, in an eminent degree, that highest quality of a General—that of promptly changing his plans in the midst of battle—who holds the thunderbolts of war in his hand, and wields them at his will.

The battle which must ensue to-morrow must be bloody, though it may not be decisive, for the enemy will fight with desperation, feeling that he risks everything on this tremendous throw. But if it be with any thanks, two battles, or a dozen battles, Gen. HOOKER will not stop short until he is either himself defeated, or has delivered the whole of the rebellion, and follows their flying columns into Richmond.

WILLIAM SWINTON.

THE GREAT BATTLE OF SUNDAY.

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, NEAR CHANCELLORSVILLE, VA., Sunday, May 3, 1863—9 P. M.

Another bloody day has been added to the calendar of this rebellion. Another terrible battle has been fought, and more fields crimsoned with human blood. Few more such days as this will find no armies left on either side to fight battles.

My last letter brought up the situation to Saturday morning. It was then certainly expected that the enemy would begin the attack as soon as it was day, and our dispositions were made accordingly. But the attack did not begin. Events proved that the enemy did design to attack, but he chose to make that attack in a manner and at a point different from what was generally anticipated by us on Saturday morning. Daylight grew broader and yet no guns. Finally, about 6 o'clock, a brass Napoleon, looking down the plank road in front of the Chancellor House, saw a regiment come into the road in column and attempt to deploy. One or two doses of canister caused them to deploy rather irregularly, and more like skirmishers on the retreat.

Soon after, Gen. HOOKER and Staff began an inspection of our lines, which occupied full two hours. Every portion was visited, and the work of the night was closely inspected. On the extreme left new lines were chosen, and the engineer officers soon marked out the line and character of the defences to be erected. When the inspection closed, the intrenchments were pronounced to be of the very best character, especially those on the right, where the columns of SLOCUM and HOWARD were posted.

There had been only slight disturbances during the night, as both forces had been busy with their axes rather than their muskets. From Gen. HOWARD'S front came a report that the enemy was engaged all night in cutting a road past his picket line to the right. How much attention was paid to this fact at the time I do not know, but subsequent events proved that it was very significant.

The day continued to pass in a very dull manner for a day of battle, and only here and there was there anything more even than desultory skirmishing and picket firing.

About 5 o'clock the pickets on the right of Gen. SLOCUM'S front reported that from a certain position wagons had been seen moving in a westerly direction nearly all day. It was at once surmised that this might be a retreat, but subsequent events proved that it was a part of an attack of altogether another nature. To ascertain, however, what it really was, Gen. SICKLES, who was still in reserve, was ordered to make a reconnoissance in heavy force in that direction. This was done with great promptness, and the divisions of Gens. BERRY and WHIPPLE, with Gen. BARLOW'S brigade, from HOWARD'S corps, were pushed out to the front, BERDAN'S brigade of sharpshooters having the advance, and supporting RANDOLPH'S battery. Our troops moved rapidly and soon became more or less engaged, especially with the artillery and the sharpshooters as skirmishers. BERDAN soon sent in some sixty prisoners, belonging to the Twenty-third Georgia, including one Major, two Captains and three Lieutenants. Being upon the ground, I examined these prisoners, and soon found that the "wagon train" which we had seen moving during the day was composed mainly of ordnance wagons and ambulances, and that Stonewall JACKSON and Staff were at the head of a column of troops which the wagons followed.

Nothing more was needed to convince us that this daring opponent was executing another of his sudden movements, and it was at once resolved to checkmate him. Gen. SICKLES was ordered to push on, and Gen. WILLIAMS' division of SLOCUM'S column was ordered to cooperate. BIRNEY pushed ahead with great vigor, and with RANDOLPH'S battery soon sent to the rear as prisoners of war the entire remnant of the Twenty-third Georgia regiment, numbering over four hundred officers and men. The column of the enemy which had been moving up this road was now literally cut in two, and Gen. WILLIAMS had commenced a flank movement on the enemy's right, which promised the most auspicious results.

But at 5 o'clock a terrific crash of musketry on our extreme right, announced that JACKSON had commenced his operations. This had been anticipated, but it was supposed that after his column was cut, the corps of Gen. HOWARD, (formerly Gen. SIGEL'S,) with its supports, would be sufficient to resist his approach, and finding that he was himself assailed in the rear, he would turn about and retreat to escape capture.

But to the disgrace of the Eleventh Corps be it said, that the division of Gen. SCHURZ, which was the first assailed, almost instantly gave way. Threats, entreaties and orders of commanders were of no avail. Thousands of these cowards threw down their guns and soon streamed down the road toward headquarters. The enemy pressed his advantage. Gen. DEVENS' division, disaffected by the demoralization of the forces in front of him, soon followed suit, and the brave General was for the second time severely wounded in the foot, while endeavoring to rally his men. Gen. HOWARD, with all his daring and resolution and vigor, could not stem the tide of the retreating and cowardly pollroons. The brigades of Cols. BUSHBECK and MCLEAN only remained fighting, and maintained themselves nobly as long as possible. But they too, gave way, though in good order, before vastly superior numbers.

Gen. HOOKER now sent to the aid of Gen. HOWARD the choicest division of his army, the creation of his own hand—the famous Second Division of the Third Corps, commanded by Major-Gen. BIRNEY. Capt. BEST soon moved his batteries on a ridge running across the road, and after a short, but sanguinary contest the further advance of the enemy was stayed.

Of course this disaster compelled the recall of SICKLES and SLOCUM, who had been pursuing their work with remarkable vigor. Gen. WILLIAMS' division returned only to find a portion of their works filled with the enemy. SICKLES' division could not communicate with the rest of the army at all by the way they advanced, and only at great risk by any other route.

This was the position at dark, and it did not look very promising. But our energetic commander was more than equal to the emergency. New dispositions to repair this disaster were at once resolved upon. Communication was at once had with Gens. BIRNEY and WHIPPLE, and a night attack ordered, to restore the connection of the lines. Gen. WARD'S brigade, of Gen. BIRNEY'S division, made the attack at 11 of night, aided by Capt. BEST'S guns, massed on the ridge in front of the enemy. BIRNEY'S position was on the extreme left of this new line of battle. But WARD'S terrific attack was entirely successful, communication was restored, and in a charge made by the brigade, a portion of the artillery lost by HOWARD was gallantly retaken by Gen. HORACE WARD.

This night attack was the most grand and terrific thing of the war. The moon shone bright, and no enemy could be seen at good musket range. The air was very still, and the roar and reverberation of the musketry and artillery past all conception. Malvern Hill was a skirmish compared with this, save in the degree of slaughter. But it was successful,—the enemy were driven back nearly half a mile, and our tired men once more slept on their arms. That night's work was ended.

Now I come to Sunday. It was perfectly evident, from the position of affairs on Saturday night, that there must be a change of our lines, which would throw the enemy out of our rear and into our front again. It will be seen by what skillful generalship the enemy was fought and checked on front, and flank, and rear, while this was being done.

Gen. REYNOLDS' First Army Corps arrived at United States Ford on Saturday afternoon. It was immediately put into position on our right, which was withdrawn from the plank road to the Ely's Ford turnpike. This line was immediately formed by Gens. REYNOLDS and MEADE, the latter's position, on the left, having been relieved by Gen. HOWARD'S Eleventh Corps, which, notwithstanding its disorganized condition was so far reorganized during the night as to be fit for duty again this morning. They were assigned the position on the left, where it was probable there would be little or no fighting, and were protected by the strong works built the day before by Gen. MEADE'S corps. Our new line now assumed the shape of a triangle, prolonged at the apex, the right of the line being somewhat longer than the left. As the portion of the line on the right was new, time was necessary to fortify and intrench it, and the work was carried on vigorously by the Fifth and First army corps.

It was very evident at daylight this morning that the day would bring forth a terrific battle. We knew that the enemy had been re-enforcing his line all night, at the expense, undoubtedly of the strength of his force on our left. His intention was, evidently, to fight for the possession of the plank road, which it was perfectly apparent he must have, as that portion of it which we then held, was subject to the enemy's assaults in front and on both flanks.

But the possession of this road was not obtained by the enemy save at our own time, at his severest cost, and after one of the most desperate, tenacious and bloody conflicts, for its short duration, of the whole war. At 5 o'clock A. M. the rebels could be plainly seen up the plank road, about a mile and a half from the Chancellor House, which Gen. HOOKER still retained as his headquarters, though a shell had gone through it the evening before, and another had cut down a tree directly in front of it.

Our line of battle was formed with Gen. BERRY'S gallant division on the right, Gen. BIRNEY next on the left, Gen. WHIPPLE and Gen. WILLIAMS supporting. At 5½ A. M. the advance became engaged in the ravine, just beyond the ridge where Capt. BEST'S guns had made their terrific onslaught the night before, and where they still frowned upon the enemy and threatened his destruction.

The rattle of musketry soon became a long continued crash, and in a few moments, as battalion after battalion became engaged, the roar surpassed all conception, and indicated that the fight would be one of the most terrible nature. Gen. BIRNEY'S division, which had checked the enemy's advance the night before, engaged him again, and if it were possible for them to add more laurels to their fame, then they did it thrice over again. The enemy advanced his infantry in overwhelming numbers, and seemed determined to crush our forces. But the brave men of SICKLES and SLOCUM, who fought their columns with desperate gallantry, held the rebels in check, and inflicted dreadful slaughter among them. Gen. FRENCH'S division was sent in on the right flank of our line at about 7 A. M., and in a short time a horde of ragged, streaming rebels running down the road, indicated that that portion of the enemy's line had been crushed. At 8 o'clock A. M., Gen. FRENCH sent his compliments to Gen. HOOKER, with the information that he had charged the enemy and was driving him before him.

SICKLES maintained the attack upon his line with great endurance. The enemy seemed determined to crush him with the immensity of his forces, and, as subsequently shown from the statements of prisoners, five whole divisions of the rebel army were precipitated upon this portion of the line, for from these five divisions we took during the day an aggregate of over two thousand prisoners.

The exploits of our gallant troops in those dark, tangled, gloomy woods may never be brought to light; but they would fill a hundred volumes. It was a deliberate, desperate hand-to-hand conflict, and the carnage was perfectly frightful. Cool officers say that the dead and wounded of the enemy covered the ground in heaps, and that the rebels seemed utterly regardless of their lives, and literally threw themselves upon the muzzles of our guns. Many desperate charges were made during the fight, particularly by BIRNEY'S division. Moor's brigade made fifteen distinct charges, and captured seven stands of colors, the Seventh New-Jersey, Col. FRANCINE, alone capturing four stands of colors and five hundred prisoners.

Gen. COUCH'S Second Army Corps, though only in part present, did excellent work. It was Gen. FRENCH who charged and drove the enemy on the flank, and it was the indomitable HANCOCK who gallantly went to the relief of the hard-pressed SICKLES.

The engagement lasted without the slightest intermission from 5½ A. M. to 9.45 A. M., when there was a temporary cessation on our part, occasioned by getting out of ammunition. We held our position for nearly an hour with the bayonet, and then, being resupplied, an order was given to fall back to the vicinity of the Chancellor House, which we did in good order. Here the contest was maintained for an hour or more, not so severely as before, but with great havoc to the enemy, and considerable loss to ourselves.

The vicinity of the Chancellor House was now the theatre of the fight, and my visits to that spot became less frequent. Gen. HOOKER maintained his headquarters there until 10 A. M., when it was set on fire by the enemy's shells, and is now in ruins. Chancellorsville is no longer in existence, having perished with the flame, but Chancellorsville is in history, never to be effaced.

Our new line was now so far established as to render it safe to withdraw all our forces on that front, which was accordingly done, and at 11.30 A. M. the musketry firing ceased.

The engagement had lasted six hours, but had been the most terrible of the war. Our artillery had literally slaughtered the enemy, and many of the companies had lost heavily in men themselves, but the guns were all saved.

The enemy was now no longer in our rear, but had been shoved down directly in our front, and is now directly between us and our forces in Fredericksburgh, and we were again in an entrenched and formidably fortified position. The enemy has gained some ground, it is true, but at the sacrifice of the flower of his force, five of his seven divisions having been cut to pieces in the effort, and over 5,000 of them have fallen into our hands.

Our right wing, under Gens. REYNOLDS and MEADE was not engaged, save the division of Gen. HUMPHREYS, which went into the woods on the enemy's left flank, and fought valiantly under their brilliant leader, until their ammunition was exhausted.

During the afternoon the enemy has made several attempts to force our lines, particularly at the apex of our position, near the Chancellor House, but Capt. WEST has massed a large quantity of artillery in such a position as to repulse with great loss everything placed within its range. The enemy tried several batteries and regiments at that point at different times during the afternoon, and they were literally destroyed by the fire of our terrible guns. Nothing can live within their range.

Our present position is impregnable if our troops continue to fight as they have to-day. Gen. LEE, the prisoners say, has issued an order that our lines must be broken at all hazards. Let them try it again, with what they have left. They can, and perhaps will destroy themselves by attacks upon this position.

Our troops are perfectly cool and confident. They have fought with great spirit and enthusiasm and will continue to do so.

The rebel prisoners report that Gen. A. P. HILL was killed this forenoon, during the sanguinary conflict his division had with Gen. BERRY'S division. Gen. BERRY was himself killed, while gallantly fighting his brave men.

THE OPERATIONS OF SATURDAY.

TWO MILES BELOW FREDERICKSBURGH, Saturday Morning, May 2, 1863.

We have abandoned the lower crossing, not because compelled to do so, but in accordance with the general plan. In doing so, a few moments since, a rebel straggler came down to take a look at the bridge, but was kept back at a respectful distance by show of our artillery. While some pickets of the Flying Division were engaged in ball playing this morning, in front of the ruins of the Bernard House, the rebels commenced throwing shells at them, but did no damage. As I write, skirmishing has commenced between our pickets on the right, the men firing rapidly.

Four o'clock.—I learn that this skirmishing was brought on by one of our men firing at the Colonel in charge of the rebel pickets. The Colonel was advancing his pickets at the time. The firing continued until about 1 o'clock, we having a few wounded. One rebel sharpshooter, who supposed that our lines had fallen back, came forward to help a wounded companion, and was made prisoner by a member of the Sixth Maine. The Parrot guns which opened upon the bridge from the left this morning, received a terrible shaking up really, this time left. The rebels are evidently abandoning the heights in front of us. A long column of troops have been filing away on the top of the crest all the afternoon. They are proceeding in the direction of the right. Their tents have all disappeared. The weather is very favorable to-day, and the boys are in magnificent spirits. Never did the army feel so buoyant and confident, in the general stalemate. The balloon has been up most of the day.

TWO MILES BELOW FREDERICKSBURGH, Saturday Evening, May 2.

Another severe skirmish took place this evening between our own and the enemy's pickets.

The Forty-third New-York, Col. BARNES; Sixty-first Pennsylvania, Col. SPEAR; Fifth Wisconsin, Col. ALLEN; Thirty-first N.Y., Col. JONES, and Sixth Maine, Col. BURNHAM, have occupied the front to-day, in the order in which they are enumerated, all under command of Col. BURNHAM. Pickets have been thrown out from this force, occupying a position this side of the Richmond road, in which the rebel line has hitherto extended. During the afternoon, Gen. BURN was in command across the river. Gen. BURN and other officers supposed that the rebels were about to attack us, from the fact that large bodies of them could be seen distinctly moving along the crest, as if to fall upon our right. When, however, he discovered the head of the rebel column moving near Fredericksburgh, he became satisfied that the enemy were abandoning their position immediately in front of us, and accordingly ordered Col. JONES, with a detachment of the Thirty-first New-York, to proceed in the gully extending to the right of our line and flank the rebel skirmishers. At the same time he ordered the skirmishers forward. As they advanced the rebels fled from the Richmond road to a building in the rear, where they divided, one portion striking off toward the heights beyond Fredericksburgh and the other running for dear life to a little wood further to the left. Meantime our skirmish line kept constantly advancing, and the regiments in the rear, "unslinging Knapsacks, advanced to their support. At 20 minutes of 7, the skirmishers on the left advanced in double-quick and succeeded in reaching the road, under cover of the side of which they delivered volley after volley into the fleeing rebels. Two companies of the Fifth Wisconsin, under Capts. WALKER and SPENCE, had also reached the road. At a point to the left of the woods, and as the enemy stopped to rally, one of the companies dashed down at them in fine style, causing them to skedaddle quickly. A portion of the Forty-third, further to the left, also moved forward across the road and up the side of the hill most gallantly, while their Colonel, accompanied by an aid, could be seen dashing away further to the right, close up, it seemed, to the rebel line. They fired at him furiously, but he escaped unharmed, and returned, reporting that there were two hundred rebels in that direction who could easily be captured.

Again our skirmishers moved forward, and again the rebels took to their heels, our boys after them on the keen full.

The officers could only with great difficulty restrain the men, who pushed forward with the utmost impetuosity.

After our lines had advanced considerable of a distance beyond the Richmond road, they fell back to it, in order to avail themselves of the protection afforded by it.

There were found knapsacks, canteens, haversacks, one or two Bibles, and other things which the rebels had left in their hasty flight. Seven "dummeys," or men of stone, were likewise found posted here.

This whole affair was plainly discernible from this side of the river, and I must say a more gallant thing I have yet to witness.

Many of our forces have crossed the river, and are moving to the road.

The rebels have built large fires on the hills directly back of Fredericksburgh, in order to give the impression that they are in force there. On our line large fires further to the rear are undoubtedly kindled with stores, burned to prevent their falling into our hands. Heavy cannonading is going on to the right to-night.

THE OPERATIONS OF SUNDAY.

TWO MILES BELOW FREDERICKSBURGH, Sunday Morning, May 3, 1863.

Very heavy firing has been going on since two o'clock all along the front, from the Bernard House to Fredericksburgh. During the night Gen. NEWTON'S and the flying divisions marched up on the other side of the river near to Fredericksburgh, and opened a masked fire on the rebels in the rifle-pits. At the same time our batteries from both sides commenced shelling the guns behind the heavy earthworks above the crest which Gen. BURNSIDE attempted to storm in the December engagement. Lieut. HAZEN'S New-York battery opened the ball. We have got a cross fire on the guns and silenced them. Our troops are in the outskirts of the city, further on the left, opposite to where I am sitting. HEZEKIAH'S Fourth New-Jersey, and SNOW'S First Maryland batteries have unlimbered beyond the old battle-field, and are shelling the woods, in which the rebel rear guard are secreted. There is one battery of small guns likewise in the woods, firing occasionally. All along the arc between the woods and the city are extensive rifle-pits, from behind which the rebels are firing. Our musket firing is likewise heavy, the men having advanced some distance beyond the former battle-field.

Half-past Seven o'clock.—The rebels have fled from their rifle-pits above Fredericksburgh and taken refuge in the woods beyond. They moved reluctantly at first, but were put to rapid flight by a few of our shells tossed after them. There are several batteries planted on the hills this side of the river, which occasionally fire.

We hope to reach the summit of the hills before noon. Everything but the rebel rear guard and the one battery is apparently gone. A few rebels in the rifle-pits, further to the left, have just set up a regular wolf howl, to divert attention in that direction, but we are moving steadily forward amid tremendous cheering.

SUNDAY MORNING—9¼ o'clock.

BARTLETT'S brigade, NEWTON'S division, consisting of the One Hundred and Twenty-first New-York, Sixteenth New-York, Twenty-Seventh and Fifth Maine, and Ninty-Sixth Pennsylvania, are charging upon the rebel battery in front of the Bernard House, led by the Ninety-sixth Pennsylvania. It has fired with considerable precision, annoying us to a considerable extent.

Fredericksburgh is occupied by COCHRAN'S old brigade and the troops of NEWTON'S division.

Nine o'clock A. M.—After a temporary lull, musketry firing has again commenced. We are losing some men.

Ten Minutes Past Nine o'clock.—The artillery on both sides have again opened, and are firing at each other rapidly.

BURN'S division hospital has moved back from the river, owing to several of the rebel shells bursting near it.

Twenty Minutes Past Nine o'clock.—Our batteries on the left have changed position, and are doing better execution.

Half-past Nine o'clock.—A pontoon bridge has been thrown across at Fredericksburgh, and persons are are passing to and fro. The rebels have removed their guns from the earthworks above Fredericksburgh. Our siege guns on this side are throwing an occasional shell.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, NEAR FALMOUTH, VA., Sunday Evening—10 P. M.

I have arrived here from Chancellorsville, and learn of the complete success of Gen. SEDGWICK'S attack upon the stronghold of the enemy at Fredericksburgh Heights.

The position was brilliantly carried by storm to-day by PRATT'S glorious light division of the Sixth Army corps, capturing two whole regiments of rebels, the Sixteenth and Eighteenth Mississippi, one company of the famous Washington Artillery of New-Orleans, and part of ALEXANDER'S artillery, including in all eight guns and nearly one thousand prisoners. The storming forces were aided by Gen. GIBBON, of the Second Army corps, who, with a force, came upon the flank and rear of the enemy, planting the American flag upon their works before they had actually opened firing upon our charging column.

The captures were complete, and our loss very moderate. Gen. SEDGWICK afterward came had the enemy and drove him back. At 6 P. M. he advanced to the Brick Church, four miles on a half out on the plank road, toward Chancellorsville.

Here he had a severe engagement with RAMSAY'S division, reinforced by troops from LEE, but repulsed them, and sent in another lot of prisoners.

The enemy is now hemmed in between HOOKER and SEDGWICK, and will, no doubt, fight with desperate tenacity to extricate himself from his desperate position; but the advantage seems to rest decidedly with us.
